ABSTRACT

Title of Thesis: A Study of Intercollegiate Soccer Data in the United States from 1905 to 1961

Cornelius R. P. Cochrane Jr.

Thesis Directed By: Dr. Marvin H. Eyler

While there have been several studies completed on the history of soccer in this country, the absence of complete and accurate records was frequently noted when attempting to trace various coaching and collegiate achievements in the sport.

Therefore the general purpose of this study was: (1) to compile and record from the existing sources, as accurately and completely as was possible, an inclusive record of Intercollegiate soccer statistics in this country; (2) to study and analyze this data and to ascertain what implications, trends and conclusions, if any, could be drawn from this information.

The desired information was gathered essentially from the NCAA Soccer Guides, the North American Soccer Guides, Soccer Journal, various newspaper articles and from correspondence and interviews with retired coaches and charter members of the National Soccer Coaches Association. The assembled information was presented in tabular form, leaving blank the years and areas where data was unobtainable. The first thirteen tables showed the specific findings of the study and the final three tables illustrated certain comparisons and conclusions.

The specific findings of the study were:

- (1) A complete list of National Championship teams for the years 1905 to 1961 was reconstructed.

- (2) A list of annual champions and the year of organization for twenty-one collegiate soccer conferences was compiled.
- (3) All-American teams from 1909-1910 to 1961 were obtained with the exception of the 1919 team list. There was no All-American team in 1918.
- (4) The names of the officers of the three national college soccer organizations that existed during the period 1905 to 1961 were reconstructed. The names of the officers of the Intercollegiate Association Football League for 1905 through 1913 and 1918 through 1920 were not obtainable.
- (5) A list of Honor Award recipients of the National Soccer Coaches Association from 1942 through 1961 was compiled.
- (6) There were thirty college coaches who had coached soccer for twenty years or longer during the period from 1905 to 1961.
- (7) There were eighteen winstreaks of twenty or more consecutive soccer victories or ties during the years 1905 to 1961.
- (8) Eleven Olympic berths were earned by college players during the years 1924 to 1960.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The author is indebted to the following coaches, both active and retired, for their correspondence, thoughts and cooperation, without which many sections of this study would not have been complete:

William Jeffrey

Robert H. Dunn

Earle C. Waters

T. Fred Holloway

Don Y. Yonker

George W. Dochat

Glenn F. H. Warner

Sincere appreciation is extended to Charles H. Scott, soccer coach at the University of Pennsylvania, for the use of the only complete set of NCAA Soccer Guides, housed at that institution.

The author is further indebted to Dr. Marvin H. Eyler for his thoughts, guidance and suggestions throughout the formulative years of this study and in the preparation of the final manuscript.

CHAPTER I

THE PROBLEM FOR STUDY

INTRODUCTION The sport of Association Football or Soccer, played and watched throughout the globe, is the national game in over fifty countries and is played in every civilized nation in the world.¹ More than 200,000 persons watched Brazil win the World Championship in 1950 at Rio de Janeiro's Municipal Stadium, largest stadium in the world.² Heretofore relegated to minor sport status in the United States and seemingly destined to remain so for some time yet to come, soccer is nevertheless meeting with rapid and widespread acceptance in the colleges of this country. Branch Rickey, at the time Vice President of the St. Louis Cardinals some twenty-five years ago, stated: "Fifty years from now soccer will supplant football as it is now played in our colleges."³ At the present time over 250 colleges list soccer as an intercollegiate sport.⁴ As soccer continues to grow, the history and records of the game become of increasingly greater interest and assume more importance. The existence of accurate and permanent records of intercollegiate soccer is known to be scattered, incomplete and contradictory.

STATEMENT OF While there have been several studies completed

THE PROBLEM on the history of soccer in this country, the absence of complete and accurate records was frequently noted when attempting to trace various coaching and collegiate achievements in the sport. To this writer's knowledge there was no known compilation of intercollegiate soccer statistics available; such as coaching tenures, collegiate winstreaks, All Americans and Conference Champions. Therefore, the problem involved in this study was to collect and analyze this data, so far as was possible, into an inclusive reference source covering the years 1905 to the present.

GENERAL PURPOSE The general purpose of this study was: (1) to
OF THE STUDY compile and record from the existing sources, as accurately and completely as was possible, an inclusive record of intercollegiate soccer statistics in this country; (2) to study and analyze this data and to ascertain what implications, trends and conclusions, if any, could be drawn from this information.

SPECIFIC The specific objectives of this study were: (1) to OBJECTIVES present a brief history of collegiate soccer in the United States as to geographical growth and including early soccer action prior to 1905; (2) to reconstruct the list of National Champions from 1905 to the present; (3) to compile the list of National Officers of the Intercollegiate Association Football League from 1905 to 1925: the National Officers of the Intercollegiate Soccer Football Association from its inception in 1926 to the present; and the National Officers of the Soccer Coaches Association from its origin in 1941 to the present; (4) to compile the list of Honor Award recipients of the National Soccer Coaches Association from 1942 to the present; (5) to ascertain the longest collegiate winstreaks and coaching tenures in the United States; (6) to compile a list of the collegiate All-Americans from 1910 to the present and their representation by schools; (7) to trace the year of organization of the various collegiate soccer conferences and their champions over the years; (8) to gather a list of collegiate members of the U S Olympic Soccer Teams from 1924 to 1960.

SIGNIFICANCE OF The study is significant in that to this writer's
THE STUDY knowledge it is the first compilation of National collegiate soccer records. The study is significant in that it should provide interested persons with information on soccer records, as there is no complete and readily available source for collegiate soccer records in this country. The Executive Committee of the NSCAA has created a committee on History and Records with the writer as chairman.

LIMITATIONS OF There was certain limitation of source material
THE STUDY connected with this study. It was not possible to trace complete records in all areas of the study: i. e. the records were incomplete on All-Americans prior to 1941; there were no records at all for the 1918 season in any areas of the study; the names of the officers of the Intercollegiate Association were unobtainable prior to 1914. Regarding the accuracy of the records: conflicts as to the National Championship teams and the longest winstreak appeared in the source material. The writer corresponded with five former coaches and referees in order to clarify and to ascertain additional information. Since the answering correspondence was based on individual recall as well as personal notes and newspaper clippings there were inconsistencies in these primary sources. The writer has noted these limitations.

REVIEW OF To this writer's knowledge there have been no related
RELATED studies on the subject of Intercollegiate Soccer LITERATURE records. There is a study underway in the Midwest which hopes to compile accurate win-loss records for soccer-playing institutions as part of a growth study on college soccer. Graham⁵ states in his preface to the first (1948) annual Soccer Guide and Record: "This is believed to be the first attempt, though somewhat meager, to gather together United States Soccer Records, which have previously been scattered far and wide. It has often been urged that such a publication would fill a long felt want in a sport which is rapidly expanding." This publication however was designed to cover the amateur and professional soccer activities, and the collegiate records were inadequate until 1959. Barclay⁶ mentions the year of origin of the sport at various institutions from 1912 to 1919. No other studies could be located which related specifically to the topic under consideration.

TERMINOLOGY For the purpose of this study the abbreviation NSCA applied to the National Soccer Coaches Association, which is the coaches' organization. The abbreviation ISFA applied to the Intercollegiate Soccer-Football Association, the institutional organization. The abbreviation USSFA applied to the United States Soccer-Football Association, the national organization which controls all amateur and professional play and is affiliated with Federation Internationale de Football Association or FIFA, the international group. The term Association when used without the preceding article 'the', was the name given to the sport prior to the use of the word soccer.

PROCEDURE FOR In locating materials that contained information
SOURCE RESEARCH relative to the study, the following reference sources were checked:

1. The Card Catalog of the Library of Congress
2. The Card Catalog of the Johns Hopkins University
3. The Card Catalog of the Enoch Pratt Free Library
4. The Annual Bibliographies of Completed Research sponsored by the Research Council of the AAHPER

12. Cureton's Master's Theses in Health, Physical Education and Recreation
13. Soccer Bibliography, NSCAA Coaching and Teaching Committee
14. International Index To Periodicals
15. Information Please Almanac
16. World Almanac

Little pertinent information regarding the problem was available from the reference sources cited above. By illustration, the Information Please Almanac contained sport records for almost every conceivable athletic activity, yet listed nothing on collegiate soccer.

Information was found to exist in the following sources:

1. National Collegiate Athletic Association Soccer Guides; published annually since 1913
2. United States Soccer Football Guide, published annually since 1948
3. Soccer Journal (formerly Newsletter), the publication of NSCAA, issued quarterly since 1942

The writer visited the University of Pennsylvania in order to examine the only complete collection of NCAA Soccer Guides; traveled to Philadelphia to search the files of the Newsletter and Soccer Journal, the publications of NSCAA; and was able to obtain all back issues of the USSFA Guides. It was essentially from these three secondary sources that the writer was able to trace, study and cross check for the information desired. However some records were unobtainable and contradictions appeared in others.

Correspondence and interviews with retired coaches and referees and with charter members of the NSCAA took place in order that the writer might clear up the inconsistencies in secondary sources. However it was not possible to answer all contradictions. The writer noted these inconsistencies and attempted to ascertain the correct item based on the available information.

The assembled information was divided into topic headings leaving blank the years and areas where data was unobtainable and the writer attempted to fill these blanks as additional information was obtained.

There were some years in which the statistics remained unavailable after all sources were examined.

CHAPTER II

A BRIEF HISTORY OF INTERCOLLEGIATE SOCCER

PRIOR TO 1905 Soccer was played in the American colleges as early as 1830, but under loose rules of play and little standardization of form.¹ In 1840 the game first appeared on the campus at Harvard, Princeton and Yale, and was played until the year 1862 when it was barred from Harvard and Yale as being too rough.²

South of New England, after the game had progressed through the early years on an intramural basis, the first intercollegiate game of soccer was played between Princeton and Rutgers in 1869, and won by Princeton 6 goals to 4.³ American football also claimed this starting date and as the game was reconstructed it became apparent that both sports could logically do so, for though the ball was propelled downfield with the feet and the hands, and not carried, the use of mass blocking and gang tackling was allowed.⁴ From the Princeton-Rutgers game modern football and soccer evolved, with football becoming the more popular activity and soccer gradually disappearing from the campus until around 1901.

In 1900 the Cricket Clubs of Philadelphia began to play soccer as a winter pastime, under the sponsorship of George W. Orton, and there is record of a soccer game that year between the Belmont Cricket Club and Girard College (school).⁵ In 1901 Haverford College, Delancey School, and the Cricket Clubs of Merion, Belmont, and Germantown all fielded soccer teams, and in 1902 a Cricket Club League was established, with First and Second Division Clubs and home and home games.⁶ The original membership of this league consisted of Belmont, Merion and two teams from Germantown. Merion won the title the first year without losing a game.⁷ Haverford College joined the league in 1903⁸ and this appeared to be the first official outside competition by a recognized college soccer team in this country.

There was no record of any college play in the Midwest at or prior to this time; however California and Stanford students 'got together for a friendly game' in 1903 on the West Coast.⁹ One source placed California-Stanford competition back to 1897.¹⁰

The following excerpt is from the 1905 Soccer Guide:

Association has been taken up by Harvard, Columbia and the University of Pennsylvania. The game has been played at Haverford for several years and it has also started at Princeton and Cornell.... The organization of an Intercollegiate Association is contemplated.¹¹

1905 TO 1925 In the spring of 1905 a small group of delegates representing Columbia, Cornell, Harvard, Haverford and the University of Pennsylvania, met at Philadelphia and organized the Intercollegiate Association Football League.¹² There was disagreement as to when the first League competition took place; one source claimed the spring of 1905¹³ and another the spring of 1906.¹⁴ It became the opinion of this writer that competition first occurred in the spring of 1906.* During the first years competition was conducted from March 15 to May 2¹⁵ and the annual meeting of the Association was held the second Saturday in May at Columbia.¹⁶

Haverford won the championship the first two years; Yale was admitted to membership in May of 1907 and shared the Title with Haverford in 1907-1908.¹⁷

The first All-American team appeared to be the one selected at the conclusion of the 1909-1910 season and was chosen by the various captains of the Intercollegiate League.¹⁸ In 1911 the National Collegiate Athletic Association established a sub-committee on soccer consisting of eight Athletic Directors, under the chairmanship of William F. Garcelon of Harvard.¹⁹

In April of 1913, the creation of the United States of America Football Association (United States Soccer Football Association) and its affiliation with the Federation Internationale de Football Association (FIFA), in 1914 gave American soccer national status and international recognition.²⁰

Princeton joined the League in 1914. At the May meeting that year the League voted to change the playing season to the fall²¹ and the Annual Meeting to the second Saturday in January.²² Columbia dropped from the League after the 1915 season due to loss of playing facilities and in 1917, owing to the war, Harvard, Princeton and Yale resigned from the League.²³ There was no competition conducted in 1918 but in 1919 the League resumed action with the same teams participating as in 1916.²⁴

Though the Intercollegiate League was the only officially recognized league at that time, soccer was being played in other parts of the country on an intramural and club basis. Springfield College first played in 1906.²⁵ The University of Chicago and the University of Illinois were playing during the 1909-1910 season.²⁶ California beat Stanford in a close 1-0 game in 1909.²⁷ Penn State began the sport in 1912.²⁸ According to team pictures and reports in the Soccer Guides, soccer was played at the following institutions during the years 1905 to 1915: Williams, Dartmouth, CCNY, Rutgers, Lafayette, Lehigh, Swarthmore, Gettysburg, Michigan, Ohio State, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Ohio Wesleyan, Kansas, Grinnell, Iowa State, St. Thomas, St. Olaf, Baylor, Nevada and Oregon. In 1916 Oregon State played Oregon Agricultural College in the first intercollegiate soccer game in the Northwest.²⁹

Regarding the selection of the All-American teams of the era, Orton had this comment:

It is understood that the All-American team is not really well named, for only players from the Intercollegiate League are considered if others were included several changes would have to be made.³⁰

In 1915 the second recognized soccer league was created, consisting of teams from Lehigh, Lafayette and Junior Varsity teams from Pennsylvania and Haverford, and titled the Pennsylvania Intercollegiate Association Football League.³¹

In this writer's opinion World War I, occurring during the formative years of college soccer, was the main reason the sport has never enjoyed real prominence in this country. The student-sponsored teams that had appeared in colleges throughout the country and were beginning to receive official recognition, were almost totally eliminated by the inactivity of the war years. Only in the East, where the establishment of official leagues and the ten years of experience and "tradition" prompted the immediate return of the sport in 1919, did soccer reappear with any of the pre-war enthusiasm. The sport continued to grow and expand in this part of the country, with the yearly addition of college teams, but in certain areas, notably the Southwest, and Pacific Northwest, it has never reappeared.

The Intercollegiate Soccer League operated with its six member schools until 1925, when it became evident that a larger and more representative organization was necessary in order to supervise adequately the rapid development of the college game in the East.³²

1926 TO 1941 Accordingly, in January of 1926, the Intercollegiate Soccer Football Association of America was formed, comprising the following twelve institutions: Cornell, Dartmouth, Harvard, ³¹Orton, op. cit. 1915, p. 13.

³²Graham, op. cit. 1948, p. 120.

Haverford, Lehigh, Pennsylvania, Penn State, Princeton, Swarthmore, Syracuse, U. S. Naval Academy and Yale.³³ The Intercollegiate League Cup, awarded annually to the winner of the League since 1905, was permanently awarded to Pennsylvania as having won the greater number of League titles.³⁴ With the formation of the ISFA the Pennsylvania Intercollegiate League was also disbanded and Pennsylvania Junior Varsity played Swarthmore for permanent possession of the State Cup, winning 1-0.³⁵

The ISFA was national in scope and had as its objectives the advancing of the game and maintaining uniformity of rules among all the colleges in the United States.³⁶

There was now for the first time since 1905 no league competition, as the new Association, by virtue of its size, limited annual play to a portion of its total membership. Scheduling was therefore up to the individual members, and no automatic champion emerged at the conclusion of a season.

In 1928 the ISFA adopted the plan of having the coaches of the various teams vote to determine the National Champion, in order to continue that tradition.³⁷

³⁷Stewart, op. cit. 1929-30, p. 66.

Membership increased during the years 1928 to 1931 with the addition of Temple, Springfield, Brown, Hamilton, Illinois, Ohio State, MIT, Williams, Amherst, Wesleyan, and Western Maryland and thus the scope of intercollegiate soccer was broadened into a series of geographically convenient groups.³⁸ The demand for league competition increased and in 1932, with the formation of the Middle Atlantic Intercollegiate Soccer League and the New England Intercollegiate Soccer League in 1934, came the return of annual compulsory scheduling and an emerging conference champion.³⁹

On the West Coast the California Intercollegiate Soccer Conference was chartered in 1926, comprising San Mateo Junior College, San Jose State, Stanford and California.⁴⁰ The Metropolitan Intercollegiate Soccer League was created in 1933;⁴¹ the Middle Atlantic States Collegiate Athletic Conference and the Eastern Intercollegiate Athletic Conference originated in 1934,⁴² as the geographical groups continued to develop competition on the league basis.

Membership in the ISFA continued to grow during these years and in 1940 the Association totaled forty colleges.⁴³

1941 TO 1962 The first organization of soccer coaches was formed in New York in January of 1941. Ten college coaches met* at the conclusion of the ISFA meeting and organized the National Soccer Coaches Association and the membership grew to 169 coaches by the end of the first year.⁴⁴

Once again with the advent of World War II, soccer activity was greatly diminished with the departure of coaches and players to the Armed Services and the dropping of intercollegiate scheduling by the colleges. A repeat performance of 1918 did not occur, however, as soccer quickly reestablished itself in the colleges after the war and membership in the ISFA increased to fifty institutions in 1957.⁴⁵ The Coaches Association selected the All-Americans in 1941⁴⁶ and created the Honor Award in 1942, intercollegiate soccer's highest award, given annually to a deserving individual for service to the sport.

The United States had been participating in Olympic Soccer since 1924, but the 1948 team was the first to have collegiate representation. Walter Bahr and Ben McLaughlin, graduates of Temple, and Rolf Valtin, an undergraduate from Swarthmore, made the Olympic Team for 1948.⁴⁷

*Inconsistency appeared here however. The 10 were believed to be: Tom Dent (Dartmouth), John Brock (Springfield), Robert Dunn (Swarthmore), Earle Waters (West Chester), Thomas Taylor (Navy), William Jeffrey (Penn State), Walter Lehman (Yale), Walter McCloud (Trinity), Howard DeNike (East Stroudsburg), Richard Schmelzer (RPI).

In the 1952 Olympics the colleges were represented by Larry Surrock of Baltimore University, William Shepell of Seton Hall and John Dunn of Temple.⁴⁸ The 1956 Team listed Richard Packer and Ron Coder, of Penn State and Zenon Snylyk from the University of Rochester.⁴⁹ The United States Soccer Team did not qualify for the Olympics in 1960.

In 1949 the NSCAA was granted associate membership in the USSFA, thereby officially linking the intercollegiate coaches with the amateur body.⁵⁰

In order to determine the National Champion, who since 1949 had been chosen by the Awards Committee of the ISFA,⁵¹ the NCAA established a National Championship Tourney held initially at the University of Connecticut in 1959, with St. Louis University winning the first championship.⁵²

In 1962 there were 129 colleges holding institutional membership in the ISFA,⁵³ over 400 members of the National Soccer Coaches Association,⁵⁴ and over 250 colleges playing soccer on a varsity basis.⁵⁵

CHAPTER III

NATIONAL AND CONFERENCE SOCCER CHAMPIONS

NATIONAL The National Champions during the early 1900's were CHAMPIONS the annual winners of the Intercollegiate Association, for at that time there was no other official competition.

Haverford College won the first championship in 1904-05,¹ however there was discrepancy as to the first year of official competition. The NCAA Soccer Guides of 1914 through 1937 listed the 1904-05 season, and Haverford as the Champion.² Other sources³ stated 1905-06 as the original date. It became the opinion of this writer that the first year of official competition was the 1905-06 season, for when the Intercollegiate League was dissolved in 1925, Pennsylvania was awarded the League Cup by virtue of winning the most League titles.⁴ Had there been official competition in the 1904-05 season, with Haverford winning, as stated in the early Guides, Haverford would have won the more championships, instead of Pennsylvania.* Furthermore, all sources stated that the organizational meeting was held in the Spring of 1905,⁵ and it seemed unlikely that competition would have been undertaken that season. The 1904-05 season therefore, appeared to have been an unofficial one, prior to the organization of the League.

With the organization of the Intercollegiate Soccer Football Association in 1926, that group assumed the responsibility of selecting the National Champion.⁶ From 1936 through 1943 there were no official Champions. However, Outstanding Teams were selected⁷ and these were listed by the writer as the Champions.

The NSCA selected the Titlists from 1944 to 1949 when the ISFA again was given the responsibility.⁸ The NCAA established the National Championship Tourney in 1959 in order to determine the Champion through a series of play-offs.⁹

CONFERENCE As the demand for league competition grew stronger CHAMPIONS among the groups of geographically convenient colleges, various independent soccer conferences emerged in the late 1920's and early 1930's.¹¹ This trend continued, with the formation of additional conferences as more colleges instituted the game. There was a record of twenty-one soccer conferences during the years 1905 to 1961¹² and sixteen of these were in operation in 1961.¹³

Table II shows the date of origin and the yearly champion of the twenty-one soccer conferences in the United States from 1905 to 1961.

CHAPTER IV

COLLEGIATE ALL-AMERICANS

SELECTION OF The first All-American Team appeared to be that ALL-AMERICANS of 1909-10. It was chosen by the various team captains of the Intercollegiate League.¹ From the following year, 1910-11, through the 1917 season the All-Americans were determined by the managers and captains of the League.² There was no team in 1918 and a 1919 team list was unobtainable.

From 1920 through 1925, Douglas Stewart, soccer coach at Pennsylvania and editor of the NCAA Guide, selected the All-Americans.³ These selections included only players from the Intercollegiate League.

Nine coaches from ISFA colleges selected the All-Americans from 1926 to 1940; including only players from member schools.⁴ In 1941 the NSCAA took over the determination of All-Americans, and in 1947 employed a statistical system devised by Fred Holloway, of Cortland, that allowed for coaches votes during the season to select the All-American team.

(New York: American Sports Publishing Company, 1910), p. 112.

²NCAA Guides, 1910-1917.

³NCAA Guides, 1921-1926.

⁴Personal correspondence of the author, letter from William Jeffrey, February 11, 1962. Coaches in selection were: James McPete (Haverford), Douglas Stewart (Penn), A. Nies (Princeton), William Jeffrey (Penn State),
John Brock (Springfield), Robert Dunn (Swarthmore), Walter Leeman (Yale), Thomas Dent (Dartmouth), Samuel Fletcher (Brown).

ALL-AMERICANS Since the 1909-10 season, when the first All-American team was selected, teams have been chosen every year except 1918.* These fifty-three teams represented 122 different colleges, 1,629 positions and an average of thirteen (13.35) players per college. Many players were named to the team for two years, thirty-four players made the team three times, and five players achieved four year recognition.

For the purpose of this study six chronological groupings were made which illustrated the initial colleges' strong representation on the All-American teams. This heavy representation gradually leveled off as other geographical areas became eligible for All America. There appeared to be a relationship between All-American selection and Championship play as evidenced by the larger number of All-American selections during years of National and Conference prominence.

Pennsylvania led all schools in total number of All-Americans (114), closely followed by Princeton (110).

Table III shows the All-American team listings from 1909-10 to 1961. Table IV contains a list of the three year All-Americans for the same period. Table V shows the breakdown of All-Americans by colleges and Table VI illustrates the numbers of All-Americans by colleges at certain intervals from 1909-10 to 1961.

There was more than one All-American team selected during the years covered by this study. The author has selected the team considered to be the official one for each year. The Appendix contains the list of outstanding players chosen by the various colleges as All-Americans during the years

*The team for 1919 was unobtainable.

1931 to 1934 (each college listed their best players).

Also included in the Appendix are the District teams for 1941 and 1942. It was the author's opinion that the abovementioned teams were not considered to be the official teams as some contained over 80 names each year. Therefore they are not included in the All-American totals yet are listed as a part of this study for reference purposes.

The spelling of players' names and their proper college has been checked by the author insofar as was possible.

CHAPTER V

NATIONAL OFFICERS OF COLLEGE SOCCER ORGANIZATIONS 1905 TO 1961

INTERCOLLEGIATE The writer was unable to obtain data concerning ASSOCIATION officers prior to the 1913-14 season. The Constitution of the League provided for three officers: President, Vice-President and Secretary-Treasurer, who shall have college or university standing at the time of election. They shall hold office for one year....and shall be elected by majority vote of the colleges represented at the Annual Meeting.¹

The constitution for 1921 provided for the re-election of officers.²

There was no available data concerning officers for 1918, 1919, and 1920.

INTERCOLLEGIATE The officers of the disbanded Intercollegiate SOCCER FOOTBALL League served in their same capacity during the ASSOCIATION first four years' existence of the ISFA.³ In 1930 the office of Assistant Secretary-Treasurer was added,⁴ presumably to cope with the increase in membership.

CHAPTER VI

INTERCOLLEGIATE SOCCER COACHING TENURES AND COLLEGE WINSTREAKS

1905 TO 1961

COACHING There were thirty college coaches who had coached soccer
TENURES for twenty years or longer. It was interesting to note that of this number only two had coached at more than one institution. Twelve of these men were presently coaching at the end of the 1961 season. The longest tenure, that of Allison Marsh of Ohio State and Amherst, totalled forty-two years at those colleges. Robert Dunn coached forty-one years at Swarthmore, the longest tenure at one institution.

COLLEGIATE There were eighteen winstreaks of twenty or more con-
WINSTREAKS secutive soccer victories or ties over collegiate opponents in the period from 1905 to 1961. In totalling these wins, victories and ties over Alumni, Club or All-Star teams, post season and Bowl Games or NCAA competition were not included.

The longest consecutive unbeaten streak was that of Penn State College, winning and tieing sixty-four games over a ten-year period (1932-1941). The University of San Francisco had wins of fifty-five and forty-one games over a twelve-year span, separated by a single loss in the seventh year. City College of New York had consecutive streaks of twenty-nine and thirty victories over seven years, separated by a single loss at the end of the fourth year.

The victory string of Springfield College included the years of 1943, 1944, and 1945, when, owing to the war, that college did not field a soccer team. However the 1946 team continued the streak by winning all eight games.

Table IX contains a list of the longest coaching tenures in college soccer, Table X shows the longest collegiate winstreaks.

CHAPTER VII

OLYMPIC, ALL-STAR AND NCAA CHAMPIONSHIP COMPETITION

OLYMPIC

The United States had been participating in Olympic soccer since 1924, but the 1948 team was the first to have collegiate representation. Walter Bahr and Ben McLaughlin, graduates of Temple, and Rolf Valtin, an undergraduate from Swarthmore, were selected for the Olympic team that year.¹ In the 1952 Olympics the colleges were represented by Larry Surrock of Baltimore University, William Sheppell of Seton Hall and John Dunn of Temple.² Richard Packer and Ron Coder of Penn State and Zenon Snylyk of Rochester earned berths on the 1956 team,³ and in 1960 Snylyk and Alexander Guild of Trinity played on the U.S. Olympic team that was eliminated in the qualifying round by Mexico.⁴

Table XI lists the collegiate representatives on the U.S. Olympic soccer teams.

ALL STAR

COMPETITION

The first record of any post season competition either by selected players or complete college teams, was the North-South Game of 1946, played in New York City and won by the South 1-0.⁵ Since that year there have been nine other post season games or series of games sponsored by various soccer organizations in order to promote the game. Many of them originated as annual contests and most of them were successfull initially, however none were in existance at the conclusion of the 1961 season.

With the creation of the NCAA Soccer Tourney in 1959, the need for additional post season competition diminished.

NATIONAL At the conclusion of the regular season in 1959 the CHAMPIONSHIPS first NCAA Soccer Tourney was held at the University of Connecticut with St. Louis University winning the championship.⁶ This tournament was firmly established by the end of the third year and the annual winner declared the National Champion.

The National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics also sponsored annual championship play and this allowed for national competition among the smaller colleges.

Held initially at Adelphi College in 1961, a third tourney, the Eastern Regionals (for NCAA Small Colleges), were won by the University of Baltimore.

Table XII contains a list of All-Star and Championship competition from 1946 to 1961.

CHAPTER VIII

SUMMARY AND CONCLUSIONS

GENERAL PURPOSE The general purpose of this study was: (1) to compile and record from the existing sources, as accurately and completely as was possible, an inclusive record of intercollegiate soccer statistics in this country; (2) to study and analyze this data and to ascertain what implications, trends and conclusions, if any, could be drawn from this information.

AVAILABLE RECORDS The intercollegiate soccer records required for the completion of this study were found to exist in many different primary and secondary sources. In some instances complete records in certain areas of the study remained unobtainable after all available sources were examined.

METHOD OF PRESENTATION The assembled information was presented in tabular form, leaving blank the years and areas where data was unobtainable. The first thirteen tables showed the specific findings of the study. The remaining three tables are comparative in nature and are included in this final chapter to illustrate certain trends and conclusions.

Table XIII shows the geographical growth of soccer in this country from 1905 to 1961, dividing the country into eight different areas: New England, New York, Mid-Atlantic, Southeast, Midwest, Farwest, Southwest, and Northwest. Five-year intervals of time were employed. Each figure represents the total number of colleges in that area that began soccer during the five-year period, based on the tentative year of origin of the sport at each school.

Table XIV shows the relationship between All-American incidence and outstanding performance on national and conference levels.

Table XV compares the ranking teams in All-American totals to the ranking teams in National Championship totals.

GEOGRAPHICAL GROWTH OF INTERCOLLEGIATE
SOCCER IN THE UNITED STATES
1905 TO 1961

	1905 1909	1910 1914	1915 1919	1920 1924	1925 1929	1930 1934	1935 1939	1940 1944	1945 1949	1950 1954	1955 1961		Total

NW		6 [#]	1 [#]									=	7
Total	9	28	7*	18	25	21	23	8	46	37	95	=	317

Based on the tentative year of origin of soccer.

The above total of 317 appears accurate by the process of taking the 250 colleges playing soccer in 1961 and adding the 30 colleges that have dropped the sport; the 20 colleges that dropped soccer for a period of years then reinstated the sport (these would be counted twice in the above table); and the 18 colleges that are no longer in existence.

*All seven colleges began soccer prior to 1917.

[#]Of the 32 colleges playing soccer in the areas other than the East prior to World War I only 4 (California, Stanford, Ohio State, and Ohio Wesleyan) played in 1919, 2 (California and Stanford) in 1920 and only seven of the above 31 (Oberlin, Michigan State, Chicago, Western Reserve, Earlham, Carleton, and Grinnell) ever reinstated the sport.

SPECIFIC Regarding the general purpose and the specific

FINDINGS objectives of the study:

- (1) A complete list of National Championship teams for the years 1905 through 1961 was reconstructed (Table I).
- (2) A list of annual champions and the year of organization for twenty-one collegiate soccer conferences was compiled (Table II).
- (3) All-American teams from 1909-10 to 1961 were obtained, with the exception of the 1919 team list. There was no team in 1918. These fifty-three teams represented 122 different colleges, 1,629 positions and an average of 13 players per college. Many players were named to the All-American team for two years; 34 players made the team three times and five players received four-year recognition. Pennsylvania led all schools in total number of All-Americans with 114 positions (Tables III, IV, V, and VI).
- (4) The names of the officers of the Intercollegiate Association Football League were unavailable from 1905 through 1913 and from 1918 through 1920. With the above exceptions a list of officers of the Intercollegiate Association Football League, the Intercollegiate Soccer Football Association and the National Soccer Coaches Association was reconstructed (Table VII).
- (5) A list of all Honor Award recipients of the National Soccer Coaches Association from 1942 through 1961 was compiled (Table VIII).
- (6) There were thirty college coaches who had coached soccer for twenty years or longer during the period from 1905 to 1961. Only two had coached at more than one institution and twelve of these men were coaching at the completion of the 1961 season. The longest tenure was 42 years, that of Allison Marsh of Ohio State and Amherst. (Table IX).
- (7) There were eighteen winstreaks of twenty or more consecutive soccer victories or ties during the period from 1905 to 1961. In totaling these winstreaks, competition against Alumni, Club or All Star teams, post season and Bowl Games or NCAA play was not included. The longest consecutive unbeaten streak was that of Penn State College, winning and tieing 64 games over a ten-year period (Table X).
- (8) Eleven Olympic berths were earned by college soccer players during the years 1924 to 1961 (Table XI).
- (9) There were ten post season games or tournaments on the National level prior to the first NCAA Soccer Tourney in 1959 (Table XII).

- (10) Soccer activity diminished greatly in this country during both World Wars. The sport experienced a very slow recovery after World War I, but had tremendous growth following the Second War (Table XIII).
- (11) In the areas other than the East, only four of the thirty-one colleges fielding soccer teams prior to World War I, returned the sport to the campus in 1919 and in twenty other colleges soccer disappeared permanently* (Table XIII).
- (12) Of the forty-three top positions listed in National Championship rankings, thirty-four of these also ranked in All-American incidence (Table XIV).
- (13) Prior to 1949 all colleges on the All-American incidence ratings and the National Championship list were from areas in the East. In the thirteen years since 1949 eight colleges from the Midwest and Farwest have ranked in All-Americans and three National Championships have been won by these colleges (Table XIV).
- (14) Of the twenty colleges that had 20 or more All-Americans over the years, only two have not won a part of a National Championship (Table XV).
- (15) Of the twenty-five colleges possessing National Championship mention, only seven did not have 20 or more All-Americans. Two of these, Columbia and St. Louis, were active in soccer only six and four years, respectively (Table XV).
- (16) Ninety-five colleges in the United States have instituted the sport of soccer since 1955. Thirty-nine colleges in the Midwest have officially recognized the sport since 1950. This is more than twice the number of schools starting soccer during any other equal period of years (Table XII).

*Nevada, Baylor, Idaho, Oregon, Oregon State, Minnesota, St. Olaf, St. Thomas, Bradley, Elmhurst, Iowa, Iowa State, Kansas, Kansas State, Missouri, Wisconsin, Mt. Union, Guilford, University of the South, and William Jewell.

Dartmouth and Maryland. Maryland was runner-up in 1960 and made the Regionals in 1959 and 1961.

Columbia, St. Louis, Drexel, Syracuse, CCNY, Franklin and Marshall (F & M), and Rider.

GENERAL

The following conclusions were drawn from

the study:

- (1) World War I, occurring during the formulative years of college soccer, was one of the main reasons the sport has never enjoyed real prominence in this country. The student-sponsored teams that had appeared in colleges throughout the United States and were beginning to receive official recognition, were almost totally eliminated by the inactivity of the war years. Only in the East, where the establishment of official leagues and the ten years of experience and "tradition" prompted the immediate return of the sport in 1919, did soccer reappear with any of the pre-war enthusiasm. The sport continued to grow and expand in the Eastern portions of the country with the yearly addition of college teams, but in certain areas, notably the Southwest and the Pacific Northwest, soccer has never reappeared.
- (2) Regarding the accuracy of All-American selection, there appeared to be a strong relationship between All-American selection and Championship play as evidenced by the larger number of All-American choices during years of National and conference prominence by a particular institution. This would bear out the fact that All-American teams contain players of championship calibre.
- (3) The rapid growth of soccer in the Midwest during the last ten years is evidence that this area is now ready for At-Large consideration in the NCAA Soccer Tourney. Heretofore only the East (New England, New York, Mid-Atlantic, and South) has been eligible. At-Large consideration is based on the number of colleges playing soccer in the respective areas.
- (4) College soccer in this country originated in the Middle-Atlantic States area during the early 1900's. It is interesting to note that the soccer growth in this region has been more consistent and experienced less fluctuation throughout the years than in any other part of the United States.
- (5) Since 1950 there has been a definite trend towards more even distribution of soccer prominence (National Champions and All-Americans) in all regions of the United States, replacing the strong Eastern dominance prevalent to that time.
